EXPLAINED THE BOOKS

IN BANKRUPTCY CASE

Examination Continued in Goldstein and Bendett Bankruptcy.

There was a continuation on Tuesday morning before Referee A. A. Browning of the examination of the bankrupt in the bankruptcy of the firm of Goldstein & Bendett. Miss Jane Toomey who was the cashier and the bookkeeper for the firm was questioned explaining much of the way the accounts of the firm were kept. David Bendett, who was one of the firm which had a market at 151 Frankin street, was not able to throw much light on the accounts of the firm when he was examined on Monday, nor was Samuel Goldstein, the other proprietor, who had furnished most of the money for the business. His lack of knowledge of English prevented him from following up the accounts on the books, and he was away from the market nearly all of every day, as he started out with a wagon and sold from that over a route in the city.

The hearing Tuesday was adjourned to the next morning, for possible further examination of others whom the trustee might like to question. V. P. A. Quinn is trustee in the estate.

Mystic Attorney Secured Diverce.

Attorney Henry W. Rathbun of Mystic was granted a divorce from Alice T. L. Rathbun of Westerly on the ground of desertion, by Judge Milton A. Shumway in the superior court in New London Tuesday morning. The action was uncontested but has been on the list as a contested matter.

The maiden name of Mrs. Rathbun was Lewis. The couple was married on Jan 4, 1904, but they separated in 1910. They have a child. It was decreed by the court that the father should have the child the rest of the time.

The case of the New York, New Harden and Hartford railway against Armstrong et al., down for trial, was postponed one week. The case is a contest over a boundary line near Shaw cove.
